

Kapil Parakh is a practicing cardiologist who serves as a Medical Lead at Google Fit and Fitbit. He has pioneered partnerships with the World Health Organization and the American Heart Association to incorporate their scientific recommendations into the product. Kapil worked on Google search to launch products that disseminate high-quality health information to one billion people. Previously, Kapil was a White House Fellow and served as principal health advisor to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. He is also the co-founder of an award-winning non-profit on health innovation. He was previously Director of Heart Failure at Johns Hopkins Bayview where he developed novel care delivery models. As a clinician-scientist he has published over 35 papers, many on psychosocial factors in heart disease. Kapil is board certified in Internal Medicine, Cardiology and Advanced Heart Failure and holds a MD, MPH and PhD. His book, Searching for Health, was published in April 2021.