

Heather Markey is a social worker by training with experience in healthcare and health equity. She received her BA in Sociology from Illinois Wesleyan University and her MSW with a concentration in Health and a sub-specialization in Immigration and Migration from Loyola University Chicago. Heather worked in healthcare for 20 years in both direct services, program management, and implementation. She worked with large health systems as well as FQHCs (Federally Qualified Health Centers) and community-based organizations running and creating programming that addresses social determinants of health. Most recently, Heather was with Teladoc Health focusing on implementing chronic condition programming with large clients, health systems, health plan, and clinical partners.