Kim is an established nurse in the Greater Philadelphia Area with experience in process improvements, sensitive investigations, project management, and organizational transformation. In her current role as Chief Quality and Innovation Officer at Delaware Valley Community Health, Inc. (DVCH), Kim works as a triad partner with the CMO and COO to develop and implement processes that effectively manage clinical systems to meet healthcare cost and quality targets. She works to capitalize on data insights, drive innovation, and collaborate with cross-functional (internal/external) partners to deliver critical healthcare and business impacts. Kim leads a dynamic team of nurses and quality professionals to ensure industry best practices are being used by the clinical care team at DVCH. Outside of work, Kim diligently advocates the importance of vaccines, social justice, and supporting the voice of marginalized populations. She's a self-proclaimed "data nerd" and enjoys the company of her family and rescue pitties.
